

RM of East St Paul Emergency Measures Organization

At Work

Every business and organization can experience a serious incident which can prevent it from continuing normal operations. This can happen any day at any time. At work, your emergency preparedness should include the development of a Business Continuity Planning (BCP) program to identify your essential services, when they need to be delivered, and how your employees will respond when there is a disruption. Business Continuity Planning is a component of emergency planning that is intended to minimize the impacts of a disruption on business activities.

Whatever the size of your organization or the nature of your business, an investment in BCP will improve your ability to minimize losses, meet obligations, and build confidence from the people who depend on your services. A Guide to Business Continuity Planning provides a summary and general advice for Business Continuity Planning.

Guide to Business Continuity Planning

Sample business continuity plans and writing guides

Disaster Recovery Journal

Disaster-Resource.com

Online magazine

Disaster Recovery Information Exchange \(DRIE Central\)

DRI Canada

Link to Website